TABLE OF CONTENTS

UNIT ONE Understanding Your Stress	1
What is stress and what is it that people in emergency communications believe about stress? What makes stress so personal and how can you assess your own stress quotient? This unit explores the facts about stress.
UNIT TWO This Wild Calling	27
Isn't that a stressful job? What is considered stressful about this type of work and what is actually stressful about the work. This is an exploration of the work of emergency communications.
UNIT THREE Know Thy Self	59
Understanding your own thoughts and belief systems is a great way for you to understand how to find more job satisfaction. This unit explores emotional intelligence and how it relates to your ability to handle stressful situations.
UNIT FOUR Neutralizing Negativity	79
Negativity is a fact of life as a human. When does it become destructive to the workplace and the workers? When can negativity be useful, if at all? This chapter explores the culture and offers advice for changing what needs to be changed.
UNIT FIVE Us Versus Them	101
Conflict is natural but can be harmful if processes are not in place for handling positive resolution. This chapter talks about mediation techniques that work to lessen stressful disputes.
UNIT SIX Difficult People	127
How can you work with people who just 'stress you out' when you simply want to enjoy your work-day? Who are these people and how can you manage your feelings around them day to day?
UNITS SEVEN Your Body	146
Sure we have heard all the facts about creating a healthy body, but really what is important to this work. With shift work, ongoing high level of mental activity, no physical activity to speak of, how can you stay physically healthy?
UNIT EIGHT I Can't Get Past It	169
There is stress and then there is stress producing illness and long term disabling stress. What is the difference, how can you tell and what needs to be done about it.
UNIT NINE Stress-Less Tips	193
Useful ideas and thoughts on how to stay well in the comm center environment. Common sense approaches, daily ways of thinking that can increase your ability to handle any stressor.
UNIT TEN Going Deeper	213
In doing work with such a high level of responsibility and challenge - there must be a sense of making a difference. How can you keep your motivation to help others when it seems you are bombarded with life events most people never have to deal with - and probably couldn't. Is this your calling?
